

LEVIATÁN Ω

One idea. 168 hours. Whatever happens.

PRESS KIT · 5 October 2026

Creator: Peter · Responsible operator: Pedro Rivilla

LEVIATÁN Ω is an art experiment about how an idea initiated by one person propagates, changes and acquires value. Contributions are voluntary and may involve AI, whose role participants declare. Each accepted contribution can issue up to ten private invitations.

An event with visible rules

The contribution window lasts 168 hours from the formal start, T0. A further 48 hours are reserved for moderation and appeals. A public genealogy uses cryptographic commitments, hashes and signatures. Valid nodes do not establish verified unique people. Zero contributions is also a valid outcome.

The registry is open to read. Submitting requires an invitation, a GitHub account and adulthood. Submissions are initially public on GitHub; complete erasure of external copies cannot be guaranteed. Participation terms, the licence, privacy notice, moderation rules and analysis plan are published and signed.

A million-euro question about value

The eventual original is the event and its authenticated provenance: final archive, genealogy, hashes, timestamp evidence and the creator's certificate. It does not require an NFT. Its proposed starting price is €1,000,000, not an appraisal or a guarantee of bids or a buyer. No auction platform is currently operating.

Participants receive no remuneration and no automatic share of a sale. The creator would receive the proceeds unless another contract were agreed. This asymmetry is disclosed before participation; questioning it is an admissible contribution.

Authorship and dissemination

Peter initiated the work and uses AI assistance to prepare and operate it under his instructions. Autonomous self-replication, automated mass outreach and invented participants are prohibited. The project sets an incremental monetary budget of €0, using free or already available resources. It is an artwork with an observational record, not a controlled scientific study.
